MAN FOUND SENSELESS, SAYS HE'S A MARQUIS

Special to The Washington Herald. New York, July 15.—Detective Flynn, of the Fifth Branch, is to make an investigation today in an effort to identify a man found unconscious at the intersection of Thirty-sixth street and Riverside avenue and who, in a rambling statement to Dr. McGovern, at the Fordham Hospital, said he was the Marquis Delare, of France, and that he had been assaulted by two men in a taxicab and thrown to the pavement. Though the man was suffering from strangulation and concussion of the brain, Dr. McGovern said he would recover and should be able to make a coherent statement to Detective Flynn, today.

No papers were found in the man's clothing, which were of good material and fashionable cut, and at the Knickerbocker Hotel, where he said he lived, it was learned no one of the name of Delare was registered.

CURIOUS FRENCH MUD MADE "TOOTSIES" SORE

London, July 15.—The correspondent of the Daily News at British headquarters in France, under date of July 13, in the course of a long review of the operations since July 7, says: "In the earlier days of the advance the heat was extreme. It was very hard to get water to the men in front, and they suffered from heat and thirst. Then there were tremendous rains, and the hardships from the cold and wet were even worse than the heat. The condition of the trenches became indescribable, and progress along them was sometimes impossible even when the water had subsided, the mud being so deep and tenacious. It still remains so deep that in many cases the men have wrenched their feet out of their shoes. The bombers found it impossible to throw bombs with any effect because they were fixed immovably up to the knees in liquid glue. The mud is so sticky and glutinous that many believe it was doctored in some way by the enemy—a suspicion which has been deepened, if it was not created, by the fact that it seems to produce a great many sort feet."

C., July 15.—The story of the rescue of the crew and machine from the coal collier Hector, after the ship had been disabled in the hurricane Thursday night, was told here yesterday when the tug Wellington arrived in port. Capt. Thersveld Nelson, master of the Wellington, declared that the rescue was carried out under the most difficult conditions because of the roughness of the water and that one lifeboat capsized. The Wellington was towing barges laden with coal from Philadelphia to Jacksonville when she ran into an 80-mile wind and the hawser snapped. While looking for the lost barges the Wellington came upon the Hector. The rescue work began immediately and the men were taken off. Capt. Joseph Newell and the remainder of those of the Hector were afterwards taken off the lighthouse tender Cypress. Only one man on the Hector is believed to have been drowned, but four others, including the chief engineer and the ship's carpenter, were badly hurt. The supposed drowned man was Gilbert Fischer.
